5 Non-price and price competition

Extract 1 Non-pricing strategies

In the pharmaceutical industry, firms tend to avoid price competition preferring to adopt non-price competition. The ingredients of many branded medicines are identical to their cheaper, non-branded equivalents. However, by promoting a brand name's supposed superior quality and spending heavily on marketing, the result can be higher profit for the firms. 5

Apple also applies a branding strategy to boost its profits. According to market research, Apple's customers think of themselves as "members of the Apple family" and they are prepared to pay more for an Apple product.

Starbucks, the global coffee shop chain, applies a non-pricing strategy of selecting convenient and prominent locations for its stores to develop brand image and increase customer loyalty. This then enables Starbucks to charge premium prices. 10

Extract 2 New car prices: UK compared to European Union (EU)

A 2016 price comparison survey carried out for the European Commission (EC) revealed substantial price differences for new cars between member states. The UK remained the most expensive for 52 of the 81 car models covered in the survey. There were price differentials for exactly the same model in different geographical markets of up to 51.6% on an Opel Astra, 48.5% on an Opel Vectra and 33.1% on a Volkswagen Golf. 5

UK consumers, attempting to take advantage of much cheaper car prices in Europe, were being obstructed by car retailers abroad who were unwilling to sell the right-hand drive versions that UK consumers demanded. 10

Car manufacturers were allowed to maintain one-brand only showrooms, fixing different prices for different EU markets. Technically, this was a breach of EU rules on free competition. However, it had been approved because of the highly specialised nature of cars which, according to the car industry, require special sales and after-care service and should not be treated like any other consumer product. In return, car makers were supposed to maintain competitive prices for the same car in different national markets. The EC had warned that the future of this arrangement was in doubt unless unjustifiable price differentials were removed. 15

Extract 3 Car hire prices in the EU

Car rental companies were investigated by the EC after it emerged that drivers were charged different prices online for the same car hire based on where they lived in Europe. Price discrimination based on residence breaks EU single market rules. Therefore the EC wrote to the Chief Executives of six major rental companies asking them to stop practising price discrimination.

5

The consumer may be given a different price after having entered his or her country of residence on the website of the car rental company concerned. For example, a consumer from Germany noticed a price increase of 100% for renting a car in the United Kingdom after entering her country of residence.

10

The EC stated that governments of each member state were likely to use their powers to ensure that EU and national laws were being applied to protect consumer rights.

6 The competitiveness of Brazilian industries

Extract 1 Price fixing investigation

The Brazilian Government is investigating 18 different companies to establish if anti-competitive practices are being applied. The investigation is looking into allegations of price fixing in relation to construction projects and the maintenance of train networks.

One part of the investigation concerns the tendering process for Government contracts.

It is claimed that there was collusion to ensure that particular companies won contracts in the bidding process. Allegedly, the companies formed a cartel which agreed that only one company would bid on each project to ensure that it received the contract. This allowed the bidding company to inflate prices and overcharge the Government.

10

A further claim is that bribes were given to Government officials in order to win contracts.

Extract 2 Brazil and international competitiveness

In terms of international competitiveness, the Brazilian economy has continued its downward trend, dropping 18 places to 75th out of 140 economies by the end of 2015. It deteriorated in most of the competitive measures. With a large fiscal deficit (government spending greater than tax revenues) and rising inflationary pressure, Brazil's weak macroeconomic performance (down 32 places to 117th) is having a negative effect on the country's competitiveness. Brazil has high tax rates and a confusing tax system. In 2011 spending on education per student was the second lowest of all OECD* countries.

5

However, Brazil's most important competitiveness strength is its extremely large market size (7th). It benefits from a relatively high level of technological readiness (54th), especially ICT use, and it showed a significant improvement in the quality of its air transport and infrastructure (95th, up 18 places). Wage costs have fallen from an index of 154 in July 2014 to 125 in June 2016.

Extract 3 Exporting from Brazil

Brazil's index of export prices fell from 157 in July 2014 to 114.8 in June 2016.

Economic analysts expect Brazil to increase its exports of soya beans, one of its main agricultural crops, for the fourth straight year following a further depreciation of the currency.

5

Brazilian exporters are faced with high interest rates on loans of between 25% – 35% and an inadequate transport system for exports. "Shipping from the interior of Brazil is highly inefficient due to poor roads and long distances to reach the country's ports", according to Gerardo Copello, a spokesman for an agricultural consulting agency.
